GREAT BRITAIN TO KEEP STRINGS ON MIDDLE EAST

Chain Of States To Be "Feudally Related" To Empire, Says "Telegraph"

AERO STATIONS PLANNED

Definite Policy Outlined As Result Of Visit By Churchill

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 6.—The Daily Telegraph states that, as the result of Mr. Churchill's visit to the Middle East, a clear cut policy is likely to be drawn up for that region, in which the following two principles will be propounded:

(1) The establishment of an Imperial aerial route from Europe across India to Australia, and

(2) The organisation of the Middle East as a chain of native autonomous states, feudally related to Great Britain.

Further proposals forecasted by the Telegraph are that Mesopotamia will become a rendezvous for the Imperial aerial forces, which will be the paramount factor there, and the aerial routes from England to the Dominions and other British possessions are to pass over the Tigris plains and Euphrates; also that an independent Arab state of Mesopotamia is to be created forthwith, with a native prince as its head. The candidature of the Emir Feisul for this position will be recommended to the Arabs, as being their most suitable ruler.

The civil budget is to be independent of grants from The Imperial Exchequer. On the other hand, it is expected that a substantial sum may be obtained from Mesopotamia for the maintenance of the Imperial contingent, which it is proposed shall be reduced to 24 battalions, and further reduced to 12 battalions within a year. When the Air Force has been definitely organised it will take over the policing of the whole area, and the garrison will then be reduced to a brigade.

According to the Telegraph, the railways built during the war will probably be put into private hands after some expenditure upon reconditioning them. In this connection it is stated that £250,000 will be expended during the current year.

A native armed force is to be created, to work with the Imperial garrison. The mountainous regions, inhabited by wild Kurdish tribes, are to be constituted a separate autonomous province. The country beyond the Jordan is to remain an independent Arab state, under the provisional government of the Emir Abdullah, assisted by British advisers.

A definite modus vivendi, it is added, is to be arranged with the Government of Palestine and French Syria, and the organisation of Palestine is to be continued on the present lines.

Chita Has Plans To Develop Siberia

(Datta News Agency)

Chita, May 5.—The government of the Far Eastern Republic has started to work out plans for their permanent financial and economic policies. The greatest attention will be paid to the development of industry and trade. And the exploitation of the natural resources of the republic will have first place in the program. The government proposes to give concessions in order to develop the Mining and Lumber industries. The Zaibakal province is rich in ores, there being great stores of iron, lead, and wolfram, these promise a rich future.

The government proposes to build railways and good roads to the uttermost parts of the provinces where there are mines or industries to warrant it. In regard to the question of railway and road communication the government is now in negotiation with two of the foreign powers. As a first step in the development of foreign trade relations it is proposed to distribute the raw materials through co-operative organisations.

Favorable Signs In Miners' Strike

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 6.—Strong efforts are being made to arrange at least a temporary settlement of the coal strike.

It is reported that the miners would accept Sir Arthur Duckham as the arbiter in this connection, upon which members of Parliament are placing fresh proposals before the Government. It is hoped that these will lead to developments during the week-end. Sir Arthur Duckham was a member of the Sankey Coal Commission in 1919, when he presented an independent report.

Meanwhile, the Northumberland miners are urging acceptance of the Government's offer, and the miners of Derby, Nottingham, Durham and Lanar are evincing an earnest wish to resume work.

DE VALERA-CRAIG CONFERENCE MAY BRING IRISH PEACE

Meeting Connected With Lord Derby's Visit, And Causes Sensation

SINN FEIN YIELDING?

Parley Described As "Greatest Event Since Easter Of 1916"

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—A Belfast telegram states, that Sir James Craig, Sir Edward Carson's chief lieutenant, and Mr. de Valera, the President of the Irish Republic, met today and exchanged views as regards the future of Ireland.

Sir James Craig has called a special meeting of Ulster Unionists for tomorrow to discuss the situation.

London, May 6.—There is an optimistic feeling in Dublin as a result of Sir James Craig's meeting with Mr. de Valera, which took place there on Wednesday.

Sir James Craig reported Mr. de Valera's views to the Viceroy, Lord Fitzalan, who immediately left for London. Hopes are expressed that the irreconcilables will not spoil the favorable outlook.

Later.—The news of the meeting between Sir James Craig, the Ulster leader, and Mr. de Valera, has caused a great sensation in Dublin. It is described as the most important event in Ireland since Easter, 1916, and opinion generally connects the meeting with Lord Derby's recent visit, as well as with the arrival of the new Viceroy, Lord Fitzalan.

Ulster Unionists believe that the meeting must have been inspired by some new advances from Sinn Fein, and it is pointed out that Mr. de Valera's electoral manifesto declares that Sinn Fein stands for "such devolution of administration and authority as would make for the satisfaction and contentment of all sections of people." This language is certainly less sweeping than that used previously.

PLAN RECEPTION TO TRADE MISSION ON WENATCHEE

American And Chinese Chambers Of Commerce Expect To Entertain

When the Admiral Line's new steamer, the Wenatchee, arrives at the China Merchants Lower Wharf tomorrow at about 2 p.m., a committee of the Shanghai American Chamber of Commerce and another from the Chinese General Chamber of Commerce, it is expected, will be on hand to extend a welcome to the nineteen members of the Honorary Commercial Commission from the Pacific Northwest which is touring the Far East in furtherance of friendly commercial relations between that section of America and the Orient.

It has not yet been definitely stated what the program of welcome will be, due to the absence of telegraphic advice from the Northwestern mission aboard the Wenatchee, but if it is at all compatible with the tourists' plans the American chamber will entertain the visitors at luncheon perhaps on Monday and the Chinese Chamber will be hosts at a dinner Monday evening.

The Wenatchee was reported out of Kobe at noon yesterday

OFFICIALS SEEK BAN REMOVAL ON LIGHT COPPERS

Meeting Of Magistrate And Gentry Considers Present Means Harm Public

"GET AT ROOT OF EVIL"

Three Resolutions Passed; To Restrict Importation Of Coin Into Shanghai

The joint order issued by the various tramway companies in the International Settlement, the French Concession and the Chinese territory placing the ban on the light-weight copper met with reaction yesterday when a conference called by the City Magistrate, Shen Pao-chang, and attended by members of the local gentry decided to allow its circulation.

The tramway company in Nantao, although it joined the other companies in the issuance of the notice, never had a chance to carry out the restriction. The Defence Commissioner, Major-General Ho Feng-lin, ordered that the company refrain from carrying out the restrictions until the City Magistrate and the members of the gentry had an opportunity to confer on the question.

As a result the meeting took place yesterday at the Yamen of the Magistrate. While the meeting appreciated the fact that these light-weight coins had been thrust on the market by profiteers it considered the means taken to restrict the circulation to be detrimental to the interests of the petty merchants and hawkers as well as people of limited means.

It was pointed out that already in the two days of enforcement in the foreign settlement, a great deal of hardship had been caused among the residents, whereas the exchange shops are the only concerns that were profiting by it. They refuse to accept these coins, but they insist on giving them to their customers when silver is exchanged. When the customer specifies the standard weight copper, they raise the value by 10 to 20 percent.

Moreover, the Magistrate contended, the three types of copper branded by the tramway companies as light in weight were not all counterfeits or smuggled in from abroad. At least one of the types placed under ban was minted authoritatively by the Government.

The meeting therefore passed three resolutions to "get at the root of the evil." They are:

1. To co-operate with the customs and railway authorities in prohibiting the importation of the coin into Shanghai.

2. To place a limit on the value of the copper. It was suggested that the Chambers of Commerce and the Shanghai Native Bankers' Guild hold a meeting and pass a resolution to limit the exchange value of the copper to 150 to the dollar.

3. To ask the tramway companies in the Settlements to lift the ban on the light-weight coins. This will be carried out by negotiations to be made by the Chinese Tramway Company, the Commissioner of Foreign Affairs and the General Chamber of Commerce with the foreign tramway companies.

SUN YAT-SEN TAKES POST; ANNOUNCES HIS POLICIES

Formally Inaugurated As President At Canton Ceremony

BIG CROWDS OUT

Heavy Rain Fails To Dampen Enthusiasm Of His Followers

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Canton, May 5.—Dr. Sun Yat-sen formally assumed office as President today. The proceedings commenced at Parliament House, where the President of the Senate, Lin Sun, formally invited Dr. Sun Yat-sen to accept the Presidency of China. Dr. Sun Yat-sen thereupon took the oath of office and was presented with the official seals.

The President then proceeded to the presidential headquarters where he gave a reception to all the civil and military officials. He subsequently witnessed parades organised by the labor guilds, students and Boy Scouts, and reviewed the troops on the Parade Ground, later returning to the Government Buildings to receive congratulations.

The President, in the course of an address, assured the people and also foreign nations that he would respect the treaties and also the principles of liberalism, constitutionalism and devotion to the common weal.

The celebrations concluded with a lantern parade, the illumination of the harbor and a procession of dragon boats.

During the day the streets, which were decorated with flags and Chinese arches, were thronged with people, despite the heavy [illegible]

It is reported here that the first move by Dr. Sun Yat-sen after his inauguration as President of the South China Republic will be the issuance of a lengthy telegram to Hsu Shih-chang, urging him to resign from the Peking presidency.

Hongkong, May 6.—In the course of his address on the assumption of office as President, at Canton, Dr. Sun Yat-sen advocated the three principles of nationality, democracy and the economic welfare of the people. He referred to the vicissitudes which had befallen the Republic since the deliverance from the Manchu regime and to militaristic actions which divided north and south.

"Being the founder of the Republic and entrusted by the National Assembly with the responsibility of putting down disorder," Dr. Sun continued, "how dare I decline to perform my duty?"

Dr. Sun advocated the principle of self-government in its application to the various provinces and the decentralisation of the powers held by the Central Government, with a view to the eventual union of the country on a federal basis. In the case of certain important economic enterprises, the Central Government should take over the direction of foreign affairs.

Dr. Sun added: "I solemnly declare faithfully and earnestly to do the utmost for the salvation of China, sweeping aside obstacles in an endeavor to effect the early unification of the country and to strengthen the foundations of the Republic.

Dr. Sun Yat-sen also issued a manifesto to the foreign Powers setting out the causes of his decision to resume the leadership of the country. These causes are, the manifesto declares, "the selfish actions of the Peking militarists and the unconstitutional basis on which the present government at Peking was created." Foreign capital and expert knowledge will be welcomed to develop the natural and industrial resources of the country, so that the world, suffering from the disastrous effects of years of war, may be benefitted. He appealed to the governments of the friendly powers to accord recognition to this government which has been formed by the same Assembly as formed the government of the Republic in 1913 and which they recognised.

Manila, May 5.—All the Chinese societies here have celebrated the inauguration of Dr. Sun Yat-sen as President. The patriotic clubs and leading merchants cabled their felicitations to "the only man capable of restoring peace and order in China."

Train Travelers In China Never Lack Sociability

BY ELSIE McCORMICK

Traveling on a Chinese train has several advantages over walking. You get so much closer to the people, for instance. The desire to observe the customs of the Far East at close range is always the reason which I give for [illegible] second class. It gets by, too, at least with other people who are traveling second class. They usually hastily assure us that they are going that way for the same reason, after which we both proceed to fence ourselves in with luggage and get as far away from these customs as possible

The chief thing that strikes the visitor is the thoroughness with which a dweller in the Far East makes himself at home in a train. Over in Japan, the first move of a citizen starting on a journey is to take his shoes off. The next is to invest in a clay teapot and the third is to blow up an air-pillow. Then he or she draws feet off the floor, places the air-pillow on a window-sill, plants an elbow on it, and dreams peacefully until it is time to buy the usual two wooden boxes of hot rice and spare culinary parts of dubious description. The scene is usually made less monotonous by the gentleman who vetoes his Western clothes in favor of a kimono during the course of the journey or the lady who gets out several combs and proceeds to make up her pompadour.

MALE ENTERTAINERS

In China the air-pillow enjoys but small vogue, its claim to popularity as a traveling companion being entirely overshadowed by the thermos-bottle. Nor does any Chinese gentleman consider parting with his footgear as essential for a happy journey, though he might feel urged to remove his long outer garment if the weather is warm. He often breaks the tedium of travel by chanting strange ditties in a high falsetto, or by engaging in a game with his friends involving fingers and much noise. If the journey is a short one, he is quite sure to have his bird-cage along, thus furnishing diversion for all concerned except the bird.

There are some features in which the Chinese trains excel those across the Pacific. For instance, the little table between seats which serves equally well as a buffet for water-melon seeds, a support for bird-cages, a foundation for solitaire, and a prop for weary heads, fulfils another useful purpose in eliminating the pilgrimage to the dining-car.

Travelers across the American continent who hear George o brunette complexion announce that dinner is being served in the dining-car just ahead, decide after tripping over the assortment of valises and infants in a [illegible] is ahead somewhere on the train that left yesterday. When he at last reaches a point where the confined odors of cooking are trying heroically to make an impression on the unyielding Pullman car atmosphere he merely has to wait at the end of the queue and balance himself while the train takes all the curves on high.

Such a train at home is usually described as a "limited," called thus because its service scarcely approaches the limit.

MENU DELIGHTS

In China, on the other hand a deft car-boy brings the dinner to one's seat, not spilling more than half of it en route. The game of trying to guess what one is going to receive after reading the menu is a popular one with all foreign travelers. Personally we have enjoyed such rare epicurean dishes as "comble kitties" and "lettuce farce," to say nothing of the "Removes" which an over-logical mind thought would naturally follow an "entree."

The average Chinese tourist is unacquainted with any artificial limits on the time for consuming food. He begins with tea as soon as he boards the train, follows it shortly with a meal, buys varnished fruit on sticks along the way, and fills up all the chronological gaps with water-melon seeds.

Those who travel by night are offered many more features, including the blanket famine during the cold snaps, and the slippery leather or wicker berths which cause the harassed traveler to spend most of the night clinging to the bed-clothes. There is a space between the upper berth and the wall especially arranged for the dropping of blankets, hot-water bottles, handkerchiefs and articles of clothing on the occupant of the berth below. This device produces an informal atmosphere and leads to many pleasant social relationships which are threshed out later in the consular courts.

Considering the matter from all angles, however, trains in China are far superior to the griffin's expectation. What is more, they usually run on time even if the station-master has to set back the clock to do it.

LLOYD GEORGE SAYS BERLIN IS FORCING ALLIES TO ACT

Obstinacy Leaves No Other Course, He Tells House

TO SEIZE RUHR

Ultimatum Handed To German Envoy At London

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—At the conclusion of this morning's meeting of the Supreme Council, the Allied ultimatum was handed to the German Ambassador.

The French and Italian delegates have left London, homeward bound.

London, May 5.—In the House of Commons today, Mr. Lloyd George, in opening the reparations debate, said that strong Allied action was necessitated not only by Germany's defaulting but by her general attitude. There were growing indications that she did not intend to carry out her obligations and that she was beginning to challenge her responsibility under pressure of public opinion.

She had been invited, he said, to make an offer to discharge the whole claim, but as the offer, when at length it was made, was so inadequate as to constitute a contemptuous defiance of the Treaty, the only thing left to be done was to allow the Treaty to function.

Mr. Lloyd George then detailed the financial proposals framed by the Supreme Council in regard to the reparations payments, and laid emphasis on the important concession that had been made in not allowing interest on unissued bonds to accumulate against Germany. He hoped that this would have important effects.

The Prime Minister went on to say that he believed the demands handed to the German Ambassador in the morning were fair, just and considerate. The German people who refused to face disagreeable facts must be confronted with the more disagreeable alternative.

THE ALTERNATIVE

He emphasised the nature of the alternative by picturing what the occupation of the Ruhr district—Germany's great pre-war arsenal—meant, saying that, with the Ruhr gone, industrial Germany would wither.

France, he said, had been prepared to march on May 1, but had realised the force of an appeal to give Germany full opportunity to consider the findings of the Reparations Commission. Germany must make up her mind to realise that there was no alternative but acceptance of the terms.

In conclusion, the Premier deprecated impatience with the attitude of France, whose position, he said, was not the same as ours or Italy's.

London, May 5.—In the course of his speech in the reparations debate, the Prime Minister dwelt on the forbearance of the Allies for the past two years in making every allowance for Germany's difficulties. She had undoubtedly defaulted as regards disarmament, for, though her surrender and destruction of guns was most satisfactory, there were still too many machine-guns and rifles not surrendered. The existence of her irregular military organisations was also disquieting, because they were capable of becoming the nucleus of a formidable army, and thus preventing France and Belgium from settling down.

Germany had also defaulted in regard to war criminals. The position in that respect was quite unsatisfactory, especially as the Allies had made very substantial concessions to her.

DEPENDS ON PROSPERITY

In dealing with the proposals of the London Conference, the Premier pointed out that the question as to whether the financial result of these proposals would be higher or lower than that of the Paris proposals depended entirely on German prosperity. If German exports did not improve it would be considerably lower than that of the Paris proposals, but if German exports approximated to the pre-war figures at the present values it would equal the Paris figures, while only if Germany became exceedingly prosperous would the figures exceed the Paris ones. The whole point of the new scheme was that Germany's annual liability would vary according to her capacity to discharge it.

He emphasised that the 25 percent duty on German exports would be in the form of bills of exchange, and would depend entirely upon the recovery of Germany's export trade, which before the war was valued at £500,000,000. Its sterling value now would be about £1,000,000,000, and 25 percent on that basis would be £250,000,000.

The Prime Minister announced that a special commission, sitting in Berlin, would be appointed to supervise the collection of the tax. The receipts from this tax and other revenues would be hypothecated to pay the interest on unissued bonds. Germany would probably be able to pay the equivalent of £150,000,000 in gold marks for the first two or three years, but if German prosperity developed the amounts would be much more considerable.

In conclusion, Mr. Lloyd George remarked that the Allies realised the difficulties of the German statesmen, who were faced by a public opinion which was against the acceptance of Germany's obligations. It would be a good thing for the German people to be brought up sharply and told firmly and distinctly that unless they accepted this, the Allies must and would take action. (Cheers.) He was not talking in the language of menace, but of practical commonsense.

Lord Robert Cecil, who followed the Prime Minister, said that the general opinion in Great Britain was that Germany's attitude on the subject of reparations had been incredibly stupid The maintenance of friendship between Great Britain and France was of immense importance, pending the full establishment of the League of Nations. He appealed to France to frame her policy, and particularly to model her language, so as to avoid any cooling off of the feelings between the two countries.

Hearty commendation of the Supreme Council's proposals was voiced by Mr. Asquith, who said that their great merit, in contradistinction to their predecessors, was that they followed the machinery of the Treaty. He declared most emphatically that it would be a criminal mistake, which would never be forgiven in the world's history, if the opportunity were allowed to pass of accepting a really reasonable method of discharging a legal and moral obligation, the actual extent and scope of which could not be measured by pecuniary compensation.

Mr. J. R. Clynes (Labor) who followed, warned them of the necessity of not supporting schemes which aimed beyond the mere enforcement of reparations.

GERMANS PRESUMING

Mr. G. N. Barnes (Labor) said the Germans had been presuming upon the excessive leniency of some sections in Great Britain, but the asserted that British people generally were convinced that Germany's best service to the world would be in facing her responsibilities at this psychological moment. He asked the French duly to recognise that Labor throughout the world was more and more taking an international view.

The Secretary of War, Sir Laming Worthington-Evans, explained that the bonds would not be worth par, and must be marketed at a discount if cash were required, but, in his opinion it would be wise to market them even at a considerable discount in order that neutrals might absorb them. They would thus cease to be of the character of an enemy debt, and would become part of Germany's external debt.

Major-General Seely insisted that the British would support the French while the United States stood out of the Anglo-French Treaty.

The discussion was noteworthy in that the speeches expressed general approval of the reparations scheme.

New York, May 5.—Practically all papers, regardless of party, favor the United States' acceptance of the Allied invitation to rejoin the conferences.

(French Wireless Service)

Paris, May 5.—The Supreme Council met at 10 o'clock last night, and the sitting did not conclude until after midnight, when agreement had been reached on all points.

In order to satisfy the scruples of the Reparations Commission in regard to certain powers proposed to be conferred upon it by the financial project, it was decided, in conformity with Paragraph 22 of Annex 2 of Part 8 of the Treaty of Versailles (which lays down that the Annex may be amended by the unanimous decision of the Governments represented on the Commission) to incorporate in the Appendix all the clauses of the financial arrangement relating to the powers of the Reparations Commission. In this way the Commission of Guarantees becomes an integral part of the Treaty of Versailles.

TREATY STIPULATION

Moreover, since Article 234 authorises the Commission to modify Germany's method of payment, it was decided in order to harmonise this article with the clause of the financial arrangement, to adopt a resolution whereby the provisions of Article 234 cannot be invoked against the interests of bond-holders. The effect of this double decision has been to put an end to the last remaining difficulties.

Paris, May 5.—The adjustment of the questions which necessitated the calling to London of the members of the Reparations Commission proved to be a particularly delicate matter, and the discussions lasted the whole of Wednesday.

M. Briand had numerous conversations with the President of the Commission (M. Dubois), Count Sforza (the Italian member of the Commission), Lord d'Abernon (British Ambassador to Germany), Sir John Bradbury (Principal British Member of the Reparations Commission), and Prince Sapieha (Polish Foreign Minister). In the afternoon the French Premier had a consultation with Mr. Lloyd George.

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—The Allies are threatened with a grave problem in Silesia, where M. Korfanty, the organiser of the Polish votes at the time of the plebiscite, has openly challenged both the Warsaw Government and the Inter-Allied Control Commission. The former removed him from the post he held as Plebiscite Commissioner after the outbreak of the revolt.

He has now issued a manifesto, declaring himself Dictator, appealing to the Poles to shake off the German bondage, announcing the establishment of a Polish Government as far as the so-called Korfanty line, and appointing the insurgent General Dolliwa as commander-in-chief.

There have been disorderly demonstrations in Warsaw against the British and Italians.

League Asks Nine Nations To Join Mandates Committe

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—In the House of Commons today, replying to Lord Robert Cecil, Mr. Balfour stated that the Council of the League of Nations had invited representatives of the following countries to become members of the Permanent Mandates Commission of the League: France, Sweden, the United States, Portugal, Great Britain, Belgium, Holland, Italy and Japan.

He added that all those thus invited had accepted except Mr. William Cameron Forbes of the United States, ex-Governor-General of the Philippines, who was obliged to decline because he had accepted an official mission from the United States.

Geneva, May 6.—The Consultative Committee of the League of Nations on the opium traffic has approved a questionnaire to be sent by the League to all governments requesting full information in regard to the steps they are taking to execute the provisions of the Hague Convention and also in regard to the production, distribution and consumption of the drugs with which the Convention deals. The information gathered will serve as a basis for suggestions as to how to co-ordinate the work of combating the evils of opium and similar drugs.

Mixed Court Jottings

Sir Beilby Alston, British Minister to China, was a visitor at the Mixed Court yesterday morning. He was received by the officials of the Court and inspected the various courtrooms and offices.

Convicted on a charge of murdering a mafoo named Faung San-tsz outside a gambling house on Soochow Road during the night of April 15, a Chinese was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment by the Mixed Court yesterday. The prisoner was one of several men who assaulted the victim as a consequence of a gambling quarrel.

A coolie convicted of highway robbery, in which two Japanese were the victims, was sentenced to a year's imprisonment and expulsion from the Settlement.

A shopkeeper charged with running an opium den at 568 Wuchang Road was fined $30 yesterday and the proprietor of a similar establishment at 403 G Tiendong Road was fined $20. Eight customers were assessed $3 each.

For stealing 56 skeins of cotton yarn from the Oriental Cotton Mill, on Yangtszepoo Road, a coolie was sent to jail for three months. One of the mill's staff testified that it is the practice of a number of these coolies to throw the skeins over the fence surrounding the mill, confederates making away with them.

The tipao of a district located off the Ward Road appeared in the Mixed Court yesterday on the charge of breaking into tombs. The complainants in the case are members of a "benevolent society" which purchased the land on which the graves are located from the accused. Mr. McKean appeared for the complainants and Mr. Rodger for the accused, who is blind. The contention of the defense is that the graves belong to the tipao, title to them not passing with the land, and that he was entitled to do as he liked with them. The case will be heard Monday. A coolie arrested while removing bricks from the graves is also charged.

The Waring Company

"A Butterfly On The Wheel" is a remarkable play, written by a man who knows his subject. It deals with the ever present question of divorce, and shows how easy it is for a woman to be condemned for the opportunity which never even desired realisation. It shows how simple it is for a woman hopelessly to compromise herself by a series of little lies to cover up harmless indiscretions.

The author of the play is E. C. Hemmerde, the famous barrister and divorce court advocate. The writer in the first two scenes cleverly weaves the net of misunderstanding around the central figures, and then carries his audience into the divorce court, where a brilliant dual of wits; or rather the experience of the barrister and the instinct of the woman for the preservation of her name, provide some extraordinary fine dialogue.

Act III was a masterpiece of realism. The setting of the stage was adequate enough, but it was the magnificent playing of Mr. Wordley Hulse as "Sir Robert Fyffe," the counsel for the prosecution; and that of Miss Jeanette Sherwin as "Peggy Admaston" that made the scene absolutely lifelike to the big audience that so plainly showed its appreciation last night at the Lyceum Theater.

The work of the two players was as fine as one could possibly wish for even in the centers of Theaterdom. The terse, tense questioning of the counsel; his appeal; his direct attack, were all thoroughly convincing. The splendid fight of the woman for her fair name; her flashes of humor; her subtle wit; her stirring defence, and subsequent tragic denial of the charges brought against her, were all played with the touch of a great artiste. Miss Sherwin rose to the heights, and it is little wonder that when the curtain fell upon this remarkable scene, the audience sat for a moment spellbound, and then broke into a storm of applause, which demanded that the curtain be raised again and again.

Splendid work by Mr. Frederick Annerley as "George Admaston," some delightful, humorous touches by Mr. Christian Morrow as "Lord Ellerdine," a grand portrayal of "Roderick Collingwood" by Mr. Charles Quartermaine, and in fact magnificent work all round made "A Butterfly On The Wheel" another memorable production, and one that further enhanced the enviable reputation that the Waring Company has already won.

Tonight "A Marriage of Convenience."

Finance Minister Insists On Quitting

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, May 5.—While the Government is still urging Chow Tzechi to retain the portfolio of Finance, Mr. Chow, who is still in very poor health, asserts definitely that he intends to retire. Mr. Chow is still in Peking but he will probably go to the western hills within the next few days. The resignations of Fan Yu-lien, Minister of Education, and Admiral Sah Chen-ping, will doubtless be accepted, and the Tientsin Conference is now chiefly engaged in selecting three new Ministers.

It is believed that Pan Fu will become Acting Minister of Finance, Pian Shou-cheng, Minister of Education, and Admiral Li Ting-hsin Minister of the Navy. When these appointments have been decided Premier Chin will return to Peking.

Peking, May 3.—The President on Saturday received Lu Chenghsiang former Minister for Foreign Affairs, with whom he discussed the present political situation.

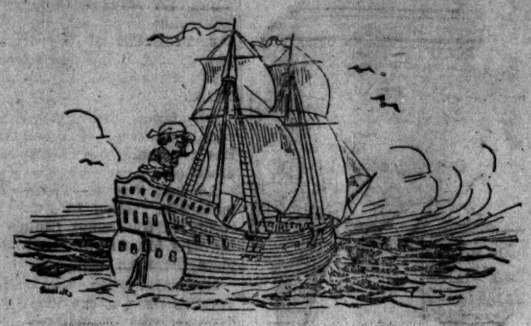
HEARTS OF OAK



Oak has long been known as a wood of sterling qualities. The stoutest vessels which ever put to sea were made from English Oak; some of them are still to be seen lying at moorings, where they have lain for a century or more, unwanted, as out of date and dilapidated. The timber in them, however, is as good as the day when it was hewn from its forest home.

It is, then, a wood which will stand all the wear and rough knocks which either you, your children or your grand-children will be able to give to it, and then be a pleasure to look upon.

WE SUPPLY OAK FOR FLOORING WAINSCOTING, PANELLING, ET ., ET., KILN-DRIED AND QUALITY GUARANTEED

Insist that all lumber for flooring and panelling for interior work bears the "Three Pines" Trade Mark, and the letters "KD" signifying kiln-dried, thus ensuring its perfect quality, and suitability for the severe climatic conditions of China.

Over 200,000 Dead In Kansu's Quakes; River Forms 3 Huge Lakes

Shocks Lasted A Month And Whole Mountains Collapsed; Many Villages Buried

BY AN EYEWITNESS

The earthquake which occurred at Kansu in Dec. was even more severe than is generally thought; and the newspapers, without a doubt owing to lack of information, have up to the present not given their readers an exact and complete idea of the extent of this disaster. I come from Kansu, where I lived during those terrible hours, where I saw with my own eyes the mass of ruins and the urgent needs of the people, and I want to arouse the sympathy of the public for the people of these devastated regions.

The earthquake was also felt in Shensi, but it was at Kansu that there were the most victims and the most damage. Kou-luain, Hai-Tcheng, Kining-Tchou, Hoeining, T'oungwei, 5 towns of this country, each having over 20,000 inhabitants, are no more.

In the same way, several neighboring villages have completely disappeared. There is the real center of the devastated regions; a frightful chaos has succeeded this happy city. It is heart-rending to come across this desolation.

In Wei ts'luain Tao, the destruction is less complete; half the inhabitants are buried underground.

In T'ien shui Hsien several villages are completely destroyed; we can name T'ien shui Kin, Ienkiakou, Mapaots'luian, Kants'luaintze, Kinklaling, Iuenmenntchenn.

In Ts'ing shui hsien, the destruction is as complete as in Kan lae tcheu, Cheetangtchen, Chakou, Nanlouop'ou.

In Ts'ing ngan Hsien, the villages of Mat'iwan, Leangchantchoangm P'imenn, Maing, exist no longer.

From Nganting to Lanchow, the effects of the earthquake are also apparent; all over there were dead men and trees, but the damage here is less.

In all these regions so horribly devastated, the poor survivors live in little thatched huts or under rush mats.

After the earthquake, the Government sent an official reporter to Kansu; in their reports, written in a hurry, the number of victims was estimated at 200,000 dead and 100,000 wounded. The real number of those who suffered is certainly much higher, but this will remain unknown. Not to mention that at Hs itcheng hsien, peopled by Mohammedans, 30,000 lives were lost. A mandarin, perhaps one of the chief of the musulmans Maluentchang living in the village of Chaikou, was buried with our 300 families and all their possessions, under two mountains.

Since the 16th December, we have felt more or less severe shocks for a whole month; we are not yet free from fear, and there is sufficient reason, for the work of destruction continues. The 15th February after a strong shock, two mountain sides crumbled, burying an entire village.

Up till the day of my departure, I travelled all over T'ienshuihsien, Fouts'iang. Everywhere I saw crumbled mountains, houses overturned, roads blocked with debris, and the unfortunate inhabitants only have small thatched huts to shelter them. One returns from these trips heart-broken, for one feels so powerless when faced with such immense and total misery. The $5,000.00 which the committee from Shanghai sent us allowed us to distribute some money to those in direst need—distributions of very small sums, five to six thousand—but this was sufficient to make these poor people happy and grateful towards their benefactors.

From Tsingchow towards Shanghai, towards the end of March, I was obliged, on account of brigands who are flooding the country, to travel around towards the North. I was thus able to see the effects of the earthquake at Nganting and Ts'iningtchou. In this district, the mountain on the north side of the road, was divided in two by a huge crevass, and one of the sides fell over into the roadway thus rendering travel very difficult. At this point the river which runs to the bottom of the valley, was arrested in its course, and formed itself into three lakes, the waters of which rose in an alarming manner. The people of this country complain that the arable land is all buried under this upheavel of earth; one understands their anxiety when we consider that the majority of them are farmers, without any resources other than a little strip of land. Crossing this country one would imagine that a raging sea had passed over this region dragging everything in its path and leaving behind it nothing but debris and a dejected looking desert. One is not at one's ease in these regions and even the animals seem paralysed with fear.

Arrived at Pingleang, I met a representative sent by the Committee of Peking, to get information about the earthquake. I gave him the impressions of one who had seen and felt this terrible thing, an earthquake; but he did not seem to attach much importance to my words. I also told him that by order of the Shanghai Committee, where compassionate men were beginning to interest themselves in Kansu, we had formed a Relief Committee already at work in several places.

The day following my arrival in Shanghai, I had the pleasure of being introduced to the gentlemen of the committee of this town. They gave me the honor of speaking a few words.

I hope my words were favorably retained in their hearts and I thank the Committee and the generous public of Shanghai which they so ably represent, for all the good they will do for the poor unfortunates of Kansu.

Catholic Missionary.

American Woman's Club Notes

The history of painting during the period of the Ming dynasty was traced in an interesting paper read before the Literary Department of the American Woman's Club yesterday by Mrs. Philip H. Dunbar.

As a whole, the period was reactionary. Worn by the bitter struggle incident to overthrowing the Mongols, China was unable to rise again to the heights of genius reached during the Sung dynasty.

"The Ming artists exaggerated and overcrowded their pictures," Mrs. Dunbar said, "Their works lack simplicity of outline and force of idea. In these overladen landscapes unity is lost. Turning from the natural to the imaginative, the artists have, in their fanciful landscapes, worked out a wealth of detail.

"Though the period of Ming is comparatively recent, yet genuine works of the really great artists and their contemporaries are not easily obtained. Therefore productions of Ming artists are always included in Chinese catalogues of painting and are considered valuable among collectors."

After describing an Imperial Academy of Painting established by the Emperor Hung Wu, Mrs. Dunbar took up in detail the achievements of the dynasty's chief artists. "The greatest painter from a Chinese point of view was Shen Chou, a man of letters as well as an artist with the brush," the speaker said, "He conveyed his Ideas to the silk with the fewest possible strokes, producing with perfect clearness the characteristics of his subject. He painted chiefly mountain peaks, clouds, waves, flowers, birds, and fishes, in loftiness of effect surpassing all his rivals yet bringing into sympathy the most lowly. Because of his generosity to the humble, his genius diffused a lasting radiance over the age in which he lived. The sixteen scrolls which he painted embody all the styles of the famous painters of Tang and Sung. He painted on a great scale—no picture was large to him unless it was forty feet or more in length.

"A close second in importance was Wen Cheng-ming, poet, calligraphist and artist born fifteen years after the death of Shen Chou. Though he loved painting, he refused to be bound by the principles or rules of any special school of artists, giving full play to the dictates of his own genius. He adopted Shen Chou as his model, but in many ways surpassed him. For rhythm and coloring he is said to walk alone in his generation."

WORK OF TAI TSIN

"Tai Tsin, who was summoned by the Emperor Hung Wu to paint the Ancestral Temple, was the founder of the landscape school and one of the foremost painters of the Ming dynasty. Though a man of genius and initiative, he was unfortunate enough to be thrown among a group of painters strictly adhering to the cademic rules. Once at a palace exhibition, the first picture shown by Tai Tsin was a scroll portraying a river scene in autumn with a solitary fisherman wearing a red coat, much absorbed in his fishing. Red has always been a difficult color to handle on silk, but Tai Tsin succeeded in reproducing it. An academician admitted that the picture was beautiful, but regretted that it lacked refinement in that red was the color of official robes and to wear this color when out fishing was a breach of etiquette. Tai Tsin refused to exhibit any more of his pictures. He returned home and died in poverty, never knowing that he had contributed much of artistic worth to his age."

Mrs. Dunbar referred more briefly to the work of T'ang Yin, who was considered worthy to rank with the older masters; Chiu Ying, who specialised in court scenes; and Lin Liang, who worked in monochrome after the Sung traditions; and Chen Yu, renowned for his landscapes. A number of lesser artists were also mentioned. The talk was illustrated both by colored slides and by an unusual collection of original Ming paintings.

Mr. Chen Kuo-chuan very generously lent two beautiful scrolls on silk, one "Lotus Blossoms and Ducks" by the artist Lu Chih, a pupil of Wen Cheng-ming; and a smaller scroll by Hsiao Yun-tsung, an artist from Anhui, who painted toward the end of the Ming dynasty.

EIGHT MING PAINTINGS

Mr. Tang Hsiung, through the courtesy of Mr. Chen Kuo-chuan, lent eight paintings by famous Ming artists, among whom are the names of T'ang Yih, Shen Chou, Lu Chih, Chien Ku, Lan Ying, and Wang Chien.

The life of the Emperor Hui Tsung, during whose reign Chinese pictorial art reached its highest point of development, was recounted in a paper read by Mrs. Fred Van Buskirk. The Emperor, who was born in 1101, became an artist of no mean note himself, reaching a degree of excellence which would have made him famous even if he were not a ruler.

"Most imperial attempts at art are only flattered mediocrity but Hui Tsung's work really rises to the heights," the speaker said, "He proceeded at once to collect about him all the famous able painters he could find, signalising the first year of his reign by establishing an Imperial Art Academy of Calligraphy and Painting. In connection with it he circulated an edict far and wide to the effect that a competition would be held for an election of a number of artists, success to depend on the interpretation of certain lines of ancient poetry. One line was 'The Bamboos envelop the inn by the bridge.' Practically all the competitors devoted their energies to an elaboration of the inn, but one who was a real artist merely allowed the sign of the inn to peep through the bamboos, suggesting the establishment behind.

"Another line selected was 'The hoof of the steed comes back heavily charged with the scent of the trampled flowers.' This was more difficult of solution, but again a clever artist rose to the occasion. He painted a cluster of butterflies following at a horse's heels, as evidence of the attraction."

But little is known of the Emperor's life outside of his ability as an artist and his devotion to Taoism. His reign was darkened by the descent of the Tartars from the north, among whom Hui Tsung spent his last days in inglorious captivity. A number of his paintings still exist, the subjects including landscapes, bird studies, and numerous portraits.

PICNIC FOR NAVY MEN

Mrs. S. M. Coles has been appointed chairman of the committee in charge of the picnic for navy men to be given by the American Woman's Club on Saturday, May twenty-first at Hongkew Park. Other members of the committee are Mesdames James Macbeth, N. E. Lurton, J. C. Upson, C. S. Upson, R. W. Squires, Fred Van Buskirk, L. Fred Patstone, Thomas B. Dunn, A. Maxwell Paget, D. B. Hawley, and Gardner Crane, Miss Margaret Sanger and Mr. Durbin. Though the outing is being arranged under the auspices of the Social Service Department, each member of the club is asked to cooperate by acting as picnic hostess for five sailors.

MARINE LEADERS IN U.S. SEE HOPE OF ENDING STRIKE

Men Are Optimistic After Conference With Secretaries Davis And Hoover

(U. S. Naval Radio)

Washington, May 5.—Representatives of the Marine engineers expressed the opinion, after a conference with Secretaries Davis and Hoover of the Departments of Labor and Commerce, respectively, that a settlement of the shipping strike was not improbable. During the day there were three conferences between the two government officials and representatives of the men and the ship owners. The latter refused to yield in their determination to cut wages 15 percent.

Several passenger vessels are being detained in various American ports pending the outcome of the trouble, among them being the steamer Nanking, at San Francisco.

Plan Reception To Trade Mission On Wenatchee

and should arrive at the Lower Wharf tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, dependent upon the stage of the tide. It had been expected that the vessel would arrive this morning but a belated departure from Yokohama has set back its schedule another day.

The Shanghai American Chamber of Commerce, acting for itself, as well as for the Chinese General Chamber, has telegraphed the Seattle commission three times asking for an expression of their wishes as to the fulfillment of their time while in Shanghai, but up until last night no reply had been received.

The Chinese Chamber is anxious to entertain the Northwestern delegation at a banquet while they are in port, and the American body also are contemplating a luncheon. Should no further advice be received until the arrival of the ship, a committee of the American organisation will meet a committee of the visitors on arrival, and arrange a program of entertainment for the duration of their stay in port.

The Northwestern mission was royally welcomed in Japan. Due to the enforced delay of the steamer at Yokohama, by defective oil and boiler pumps, much time was available for sightseeing and for entertainment. The delegates were taken to Tokio. They were met at the station by a committee of the Tokio Chamber of Commerce, shown the Stock Exchange and the Bank of Japan and then entertained at tiffin. Viscount Shibusawa and the president of the Tokio Chamber of Commerce gave speeches of welcome to the party and optimistic prophesies of trade prospects between Japan and the American Northwest.

Many of the Seattle mission travelled overland from Tokio and Yokohama to Kobe, where they boarded the Wenatchee again. Among these tourists were Captain Robert Dollar and Mrs. Dollar, who also are passengers on the Wenatchee.

Of the 74 cabin passengers on the Wenatchee on her maiden voyage, 45 are making the round trip to Manila and back to Seattle. Among these 45 the most prominent are the members of the commercial commission from the Pacific Northwest, the personnel of which is as follows:

Captain Hemes S. Gibson (Chairman), chairman of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, Wenatchee celebration committee, and president of the International Stevedoring Company, and other business enterprises; Chester Thorne, vice-president of the Admiral Line; Eugene G. Anderson, vice-president pro tem of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce and president of the Western Dry Goods Company; H. C. Henry, president of the Metropolitan Bank of Seattle and a railroad builder of note; Henry G. Shaw, trustee of the Tacoma Commercial Club and Chamber of Commerce and trustee of the International Heath Unit Tile Co.; R. D. Emerson, president of the Aloha Lumber Company; Roy O. Hadley, secretary of the Seattle Chamber of Commerce and Commercial Club and secretary of the commission; J. H. Fox, President of the Commerical Boiler Works; E. C. Richards, treasurer of the Hunt and Mottet Company of Tacoma; Charles E. Hill, secretary of the Douglas Fir Exploitation and Export Company; Francis Guy Frink, vice-president of the Washington Iron Works of Seattle; Charles F. Seeger, special representative of the Northern Pacific Railway Company; David Rodgers, president of the Seattle shipbuilding and Dry dock Co.; H. F. Compton, president of the H. F. Compton Lumber Company of Seattle; George Stroble, vice-president of the C. C. Filson Co. of Seattle; James Q. Clemmer, motion picture theater promoter; B. F. Battersby of Battersby and Smith, tobacco merchants and Alexander Singelow, the official photographer of the commission.

FOR SLUGGISH, CONGESTED LIVER AND BILIOUSNESS

TRAINED NURSE ADVISES USE OF ALKALINE SALTRATES, AND TELLS WHY ORDINARY SALINES FAIL.

By ALICE LANDLES, Certified Nurse.

Contrary to common belief such drastic purgatives as Epsom, Rochelle, or other "morning salts" and powders as generally used have practically no effect upon the liver. They produce a strong aperient action by passing straight through to the lower bowel almost immediately, and flushing out the important intestinal juices, thus storing up future trouble, as anyone knows who has tried them. When the saline water is not absorbed or assimilated by the stomach or intestines at all, it of course cannot reach the liver, and this accounts for so many of my patients saying ordinary salts proved worthless for their liver disorders. I do not advise the "pill habit" as a last resort, for, if a few small pills are powerful enough to affect the entire contents of the intestines, they must be strong enough to produce an exceedingly harmful reaction.

My invariable advice to chronic constipation sufferers is to drink two or three times during the day (not before breakfast) a tumbler of water in which has been dissolved a teaspoonful of Alkia Saltrates. Any chemist can supply a few ounces of this at small cost, or easily get it for you, and it will clear out a clogged liver or regulate the bile flow more quickly than anything I know of, this being on account of the extreme rapidity with which it is absorbed. This water is pleasant to drink, has no salty taste, and you cannot drink too much of it. I have never noticed any but excellent after-effects, and results have always proved permament.

NOTE.—We are informed that Messrs. A S. Watson & Co. of 16 Nanking Road, Shanghai, stock a specially high grade of Alkia Saltrates and are in a position to supply this remarkable compound at very low cost.

Soviet Too Hasty On Nationalisation

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—A report issued by the Committee, presided over by Lord Emmott, appointed last year to collect information concerning Russia, shows that the Bolshevists made a fatal mistake in carrying out hasty nationalisation when the utmost care and discrimination were needed, after which industry broke down, placing a discount on agriculture and production, which brought no advantage to the peasants and engendered civil war.

The Soviets have made superhuman efforts to repair the ravages thus created but a complete economic collapse set in at the end of 1919, and compelled the leaders to realise the hopelessness of reconstruction without the employment of foreign capital.

GRAND NATIONAL, MAFOOS' EVENT AND "CONSOLATIONS" FEATURE OFF-DAY PROGRAM

Old Bill Not To Run In Steeplechase; Races On For Ponies Which Showed Little On First Three Days; Johnstone Leads Jockeys

Shanghai race-goers will be given another chance at the pari-mutuels this afternoon with the running of the ten events on the off-day card of the Spring race meeting. The first three days of the meeting, though ideal for surprises and upsets, saw the betting public cashing race after race, when favorites in nearly every event came home ahead.

Ponies that have started during the present meeting and have failed to win will be given ample chance to score today. The card comprises five consolation events, three at five furlongs and two at a mile and a quarter. The tenth event will see the regular contest between mafoos. Ponies that have started at least twice at this meeting and have not won are eligible.

The main event on the card is the Grand National Steeplechase, the fourth race. The race will go over Morriss' water jump and twice around and in, a distance of about two miles. Twenty four horses are entered, including such good jumpers as Vauxhall, Wild Cat, Djemnah and Medina-Sidonia.

Old Bill, expected to have an excellent chance of winning the feature race, it was announced last night, would not be started because of its suffering from a sore shoulder.

The Grand National Steeplechase both last spring and autumn was won by Petersfield, which is not entered this year. At the Spring meet Old Bill, the winner of Wednesday's champions, was second, and in the Autumn Medinia Sidonia finished second.

In the summary of performances of the various jockeys who have placed on the first three days of the Spring meet Mr. Johnstone ranks first with five wins, five seconds and four thirds.

Mr. Hill is second with five wins, three seconds and seven thirds. Mr. Crokam also scored five wins.

ROUGHTOWNRIVER WAS TOUGH STUFF

It Was Against The Prohibition Laws To Drink The Juice From This Mighty Torrent

BY "BUGS" BAER

Sporting Editor.

The champion of Roughtown may have made more widows than wood alcohol, but my man Mal Maloney was the bird who made all the Hartford insurance companies raise their rates. When Hap fought, the press section was reserved for the coroner's jury. He used to train with freight elevators instead of dumb bells. Every time he shook a man's hand he'd loosen his teeth. He met Gink Fowler for the championship of everything and knocked Gink loose from the next census.

Yours over the muddy Mississippi, GORGE MALONEY,
St. Louis.

A man who uses only freight elevators for chest pulleys has nothing in common with a bird like Gink Fowler, knuckle merchant prince of Roughtown. At the age of two, Gink was an anvil juggler in the hardware section of the Boy Scoots. At ten, he got a job to bend the Leaning Tower of Pisa the other way. At fourteen, he pushed the Sphinx around to face Kokomo, Indiana. And at twenty, in the full, fragile glow of manhood with the downy peach still on his heatherbloom cheeks, Ginkus got a job in a roundhouse as a locomotive sorter.

GINK BROKE THE RULE

A loco sorter is a man who sorts locomotives. He used to arrange a few dozen locos in a bundle and then carry 'em off. He would have been successful in this branch of science. But one day he grew careless. He was carrying a bundle of camel-back engines by the string. The package broke. Gink was fired for violating the most influential ethics of railroading. It was a maxim that you should never carry a ten-ton loco by the string.

They set him back to holding up weak bridges on the Roughtown River. Incidentally, the Roughtown River was the roughest river in the world. The minnows used to chase the whales right up into the mezzanine floor of Roughtown's best hotel. The frogs used to jump over transoms right through the eye of a needle and get back to the river in time for lunch. Nothing would sink in that tough river.

You couldn't stick an oar in the water without first boring a hole with a brace and bit. An Eastern scientist once analysed the medical properties of this life-giving fluid and discovered that it contained kerosene, camphor balls, tiger fat, nitro-cellulose and carbolic acid. A Roughtown lady once washed the family linen in the Roughtown River and the water ate right through everything in sight and then started looking in the telephone book for new laundry marks.

WHY GINK GOT MAD

The Roughtown Volunteer Fire Brigade turned out on a three-alarm fire in the asbestos works. They ran a pump down to the river, turned on the juice. It was like throwing gun-powder in the cellar furnace. The fire spread all over Roughtown. That was the day that Gink walloped eight firemen because they called him before his mattress caught fire.

This man Mal Maloney never fought Gink Fowler. On the first day of Hap's training he thought he would wind up with a plunge into the river. As he was diving a little goldfish swung his little fins and threw an ounce of spray into the sunlight. Hap's head struck this ounce of spray and the impact busted his collar button.

That was the nearest Mal got to Gink Fowler.

Chinese Girls Taking Part In Far Eastern Olympics; Will Demonstrate Games

Over 500 Girls, Now Training Under Direction Of Y.W.C.A. Teachers, To Appear In Mass Games And Group Demonstrations

For the first time in history Chinese girls will take part in the Far Eastern version of the Olympic Games. In the Western countries girls are familiar on the athletic fields and in the swimming tanks, even competing for world honors. In the Philippine Islands every school and organisation has its girls indoor baseball team and the young Filipinos take great interest in all varieties of athletics.

Chinese girls have taken part in athletics but little and never have been seen in action in the Far Easterns. This year at the Olympics over 500 Chinese girls will take part in a program of games demonstration. There will be 30 different groups, each group demonstrating some modern form of recreation.

The recruiting and training of the girls are under the direction of Miss Vera Barger, national director of physical education for the Y.W.C.A. of China and principal of the Normal Training School for Hygiene and Physical Education conducted at 37 Kinchow Road. Miss Barger is being assisted by Miss Celia Moyer and Miss P. T. Yoen of the Y.W.C.A. staff. For several weeks a normal training class of representatives from all the Shanghai schools for girls has been meeting at the local Y.W.C.A. in preparation for this event.

While the exhibition to be staged by the girls will include a mass drill and probably a fancy march all over the field, the principal idea is to demonstrate in many small groups such games and activities as are easily adaptable for general use.

Moving pictures will be taken during the afternoon, including many "close-ups" as well as covering the mass formations, and the demonstration can thus be reproduced in other centers in the interior where athletics for women are still almost unknown.

Huron Due To Arrive In Time For Olympic

Baseball will be given a boost late this month, probably about the 25th or 26th, when the U.S.S. Huron, flagship of the Asiatic Fleet, will arrive in Shanghai. A radio, received by Dr. John H. Gray yesterday from the fleet athletic officer, stated that the flagship would be here in time for the Far Eastern Games, which begin on May 30.

Australian Cricket Team Gets Setback

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—The match between the Australians and Mr. Lionel Robinson's eleven was continued today at Attleborough, Norfolk, in close weather.

The Australians, who had scored 18 runs for no wicket yesterday, resumed their innings, but collapsed completely after the lunch interval, owing to the hot sun affecting the wet wicket. The innings closed for 136, Armstrong contributing 51. Douglas took six wickets for 64 runs.

Robinson's eleven then went in and made 156 runs for one wicket before close of play. Hobbs retired hurt, with 85 runs to his credit. He gave a brilliant display without a single chance. Jupp was out for 51.

SCHOOL LADS IN CROSS-COUNTRY CONTEST TODAY

Over 50 Boys Will Compete In Race In Kiangwan, Beginning At 10 a.m.

The Interscholastic cross-country run will start from the forking of the two Kiangwan Roads this morning at 10 o'clock. The race will be run over the old road to the point where it joins the new. It will then continue on the new road to the first gate of the park, in the park to the track and around the track once before finishing. This arrangement will give the spectators an opportunity to get a good view of the finish of the race.

All officials are requested to meet at the entrance of the Hongkew Park at 9:45 o'clock in order to go over the rules of the contest. The officials are:

Referee and starter, C. D. Giauque.
Finish judge, W. D. Anderson.
Scorer and press steward, S. Hore.
Inspectors, W. W. Bartlett and J. J. Pope.
Time-keepers, G. C. Stockton, T. O. Bargess, and W. C. Divers.
Clerk of the course, D. Drake.

More than 50 students of the American School, the Thomas Hanbury School and the French School have entered for the competition. It is open to the members of the Interscholastic Association. Keen competition is expected. The winning team will hold for a year a silver shield donated by the Oxford and Cambridge Society. It will be competed for annually. Later in the month the Interscholastic Association will hold its annual field and track athletic meet for the Pearce-Merriman Shield.

PEKING NINE STRONG

Peking's team this year is expected to be a strong aggregation, although the absence of Freddie Knauf, of the U. S. Marine Corps, will be felt. The Marines' star third-sacker and all-round athlete has been honorably discharged from the Corps and is on his way back to the United States.

STRONG MAN TO APPEAR HERE FOR FAMINE AID

Three-Day Gymnastic Show Starts At New World Monday Night

A three-day performance of Chinese gymnastics will be staged by the Famine Relief Gymnastic Brigade under the leadership of General Ma Liang, formerly of Shantung, at the Great World, beginning on Monday. The exhibitions will take place daily from 9:30 in the evening to 12:30 o'clock in the morning.

Notable among the troupe is Mr. Wang Tse-ping, formerly of the second division, who claims the honor of having vanquished the strong man of Russia, Contell, who toured China several years ago and was not defeated until he met Mr. Wang. Wang was then a secretary in the Ministry of War. He outclassed the Russian in every department of physical competition.

The program will include boxing, kicking, fencing, juggling, rope dancing, lifting heavy weights and a number of other interesting exhibitions.

Proceeds will go to the North China famine relief fund. The performance has the support of the Tuchuns of Chekiang and Kiangsu and the local military authorities.

SEAMAN BOWBIDGE CLAIMS HE WAS OFFERED BRIBE TO THROW FIGHT WITH MARTIN

Was So Disgusted, He Writes, That He Decided Not To Go On—Previous Decisions Against Shipmates Did Not Influence Him

An attempt to bribe him to "throw" his fight with R. B. Martin of the Shanghai Boxing Club at the tournament at the Town Hall on May 4, so disgusted Seaman Bowbidge, of the British cruiser Carlisle, former middleweight champion of the Mediterranean fleet, that he decided not to go on, according to a letter received at this office yesterday.

The letter follows:

Bowbidge's reference to the decisions on the first night's boxing is very generous. It was understood after the completion of Tuesday's program that the naval men were dissatisfied with the decisions of the referee. The Carlisle men on that night fared badly. Of five seamen matched against Shanghai men only one obtained a decision. On the second night but one seaman won out of three engaged in mixed events.

Mr. R. B. Martin, who was to have been Bowbidge's opponent in the main event Wednesday night when shown the above letter last night said:

"Of course I know nothing about any offer made to Bowbidge. If it were made I certainly would like to find out who had approached the man who was to have been my opponent. Charges, such as these, whether proven or not, will not help the boxing game here."

An official of the Shanghai Boxing Club expressed the opinion that even though a $100 bribe had been offered Bowbidge there was not sufficient reason for him to refuse to go on. There was a big public present at the second night of the tournament expecting to see the Martin-Bowbidge contest, and they were justly disappointed when the bout was called off.

The statement that the seaman had been approached with a bribe was surprising, the official said, inasmuch as there was no betting on any of the bouts, as far as one could see or hear: There was no reason evident for a bribe such as suggested.

Another official of the Boxing

Rudolph To Pitch For Boston Club On Bonus System

Manager Mitchell of the Boston Braves has with him again Richard Rudolph, the "Little Master," one of the three pitchers who brought victory to the Braves in 1914. Rudolph's arm failed him last year and he was given permission to play anywhere, but he decided after a conference with President Grant that he would be back with the Braves on a bonus basis. So much for the games he pitches, and so much more the games he wins.

Ming Li To Hold Sports Tomorrow

Weather permitting, the Ming Li Middle School, West Gate, will hold its annual sports meeting at the Public Recreation Ground, Pont St. Catherine, tomorrow afternoon. The first event is scheduled to take place at 1 o'clock.

Bribe Offered, Says Bowbidge

Club also deplored Bowbidge's assertion. "He should have fought Martin," he said. "If an attempt were made to bribe him he should have told the officials so that details might have been obtained."

The Carlisle, it is understood, is sailing from Shanghai on Tuesday, not to return for several months, so there is no prospect of these two good men getting together. It is hoped among fight fans in Shanghai, however, to see ex-Champion Bowbidge in action in one of the boxing tournaments which will be arranged later in the year.

Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir.—Would you kindly cause the following to be published in the columns of your paper, so that the general public of Shanghai may see why I did not box R. B. Martin on the night of May 4, and at the same time vindicating myself from any reflections which may have been cast upon my reputation as a boxer.

"To The Boxing Enthusiasts of Shanghai."

I would like to give my one and only reason for failing to box Martin on the night of the 4th and think when you know it, you will, doubtless, admit that my action, in refusing to appear, was quite in order. No doubt, Martin was disappointed very much, but so was perhaps more so.

Now, according to reports, the decisions of the first night's boxing were considered unfair, but these reports did not in the least way influence me or cause me in any way to flinch from my fight, to which I had looked forward with eagerness and for which I trained hard, knowing that I was up against a good man.

To make a long story short, on the night of the May 4, as I was about to strip for the fight, a certain gentleman tried to induce me to fight and allow my opponent to win, promising to pay me $100 for doing so. In plain language 'twas purely and simply a case of bribery.

The principle of the thing disgusted me and straight away, I decided that I would not fight. As a boxing man, I was always taught to be straight, clean and honest, and up to these traits I have always acted to the best of my ability.

Furthermore, as for being touted a champion, 'tis not a case of being "touted" at all. In four years, I fought eleven professional (2nd class) bouts, winning nine and getting two draws. Recently in Hongkong, I had my first defeat, if I may call it such, when I was forced to retire with an injured hand.

As a last word I wish to state I am quite willing to defend my name and reputation by meeting any middle weight in Shanghai for about twenty, three-minute rounds.

I remain, Sir,

Yours Sincerely,
G. Bowbidge.
H. M. S. Carlisle.

Oberlin Students Form Association At Meeting Here

Movement Develops At Tiffin Given Professor G. D. Hubbard

A group of Oberlin College people met at the Yih Ping Shang Hotel yesterday noon to celebrate the occasion of Professor G. D. Hubbard's visit to the Orient, a few of the Oberlin Chinese giving the others an excellent Chinese feast which was greatly enjoyed by all.

During the course of the meeting, it was suggested that an Oberlin Association be formed. The idea seemed to meet with approval and Professor Hubbard was asked to take the chair to lead in the discussion and in the carrying on of the necessary business. Miss Beulah Chang was asked to serve as chairman of the constitution committee, which is soon to meet to draw up rules for the organisation. Some of the purposes of the association are as follows:

1. To keep all ex-students in China in touch with Oberlin College.

2. To bring before the attention of people in China and at home the development and the needs of the Oberlin educational work in Shansi.

3. To interest Chinese students in Oberlin.

4. To interest Oberlin College professors in China and the Orient as a profitable place to spend their sabbatical years.

The Association does not anticipate that it can ever hold a meeting of all who may be members, but through letters and perhaps a monthly magazine, it hopes to accomplish the purposes of its organisation.

Those who attended the dinner were Professor George D. Hubbard of Oberlin College; Mr. H. H. Kung (1906), Principal of the Oberlin-Shansi Memorial College; Miss Beulah Chang (1916), the first Chinese girl to graduate from Oberlin College; Miss Mary T. Suvoong (1910 Summer School); Mrs. C. L. Bau (ex-1915); Miss Daisy Bau (Acad. 1914); Mr. S. E. Lu (1919); Mr. S. F. Chang, a prospective Oberlin student; and Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Giauque (1916).

The Bandmans

A good house attended the Bandman Company's repeat performance of Bairnsfather's "The Better 'Ole" at the Olympic Theater last night and the show was as enthusiastically received as at its premier here. "Oh Joy" is the number for this evening and the Sunday matinee will be "Irene."

London "Times" Sees Good Outlook For China's Finance

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—Commenting on a dispatch from its Peking correspondent, dealing with China's financial problems, the Times infers that there is now a better prospect of the Chinese Government's finances being placed on a sounder footing, seeing that the local banks are all insisting on financial reform, and that the Chinese Consortium is definitely pledged to co-operative action.

If increasing financial necessities induce sounder methods of finance on the part of the Chinese Government, and thus lessen the funds available for internal strife, there should be a prospect of a resumption of the Consortium's activities as the conditions of the world's money markets improve.

"Culture" Pearls Causing Big Stir Among Jewellers

(Reuter's Service)

London, May 5.—Quite a stir has been caused by the revelations in regard to "cultured" pearls. The Gem Trades Section of the Chamber of Commerce, in the course of a statement on the subject, says that a special committee of the trade is taking steps to ensure a definition of "pearls" for protection of the public, and has decided that "cultured" pearls ought to be so described, under penalty.

French gem dealers have already warned the public, and state that guilty merchants passing off the "cultured" pearls as genuine will be severely liable to prosecution for fraud.

Nanking University Wins Debate Over Shanghai College

The University of Nanking defeated the Shanghai college in a debate last evening at the Martyrs' Hall in the City Y.M.C.A. The subject argued was "Resolved: That the educational system in China should be so decentralised as to give each province autonomy in all educational matters."

The Nanking trio consisting of Chen Kwei-chi, Chu Feng-chang and Wei Hsich-ren upheld the affirmative, while the Shanghai team, comprising William Chen, S. C. Dzou and S. K. Lo, defended the negative. Dr. McGillivray presided over the meeting.

The judges of the debate were Dr. T. H. Lee, president of the Futan University; Dr. Fong F. Sec. of the Commercial Press, and Miss L. J. Tuttle of the Macyrie School. Their vote was unanimous in favor of Nanking.

Last night's debate was the third annual debate of the East China Intercollegiate English Debating Association. In the preliminaries held last December, the Shanghai college won over Hangchow college by default, and the University of Nanking defeated St. John's at Nanking.

Amusement Places Asked To Close On "Humiliation Day"

Public amusement places have been requested to suspend their business on May 9 in observation of the National Humiliation Day in a letter circulated yesterday by the Young Men's Lecture Brigade. The movement is endorsed by several other local Chinese organisations.

The day is considered one of national disgrace, because on this date in 1915, Yuan Shih-k'ai accepted the notorious 21 demands made on China by Japan.

The Shanghai Street Unions have already decided to fly the national colors at half mast throughout the day.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying power, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them wilfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

DRYS MOBILIZING FOR A REVERSAL OF BEER RULING

Dr. Crafts Files Formal Protest Asking Daugherty To Set Aside Palmer Decision

'CONVALESCENCE DEADLY'

Attorney General States He Would Not Hesitate To Vacate Any Unsound Order

Washington, March 10.—A. Mitchell Palmer's ruling that beer could be prescribed medicinally and that no authority was conferred by the law to prevent or limit this was a bombshell to the Prohibition forces which is still reverberating.

A drive on Attorney General Daugherty to get him to reverse the decision of his predecessor has begun. Mr. Daugherty said he would read the decision carefully but gave no indication of his intentions.

"Isn't it the custom," he was asked, "that an Attorney General's ruling remains in force until acted on by a court, rather than that it be reviewed by a succeeding Attorney General?"

"That is undoubtedly the custom," he replied, "but at the same time I would have no hesitancy in vacating a ruling that seemed to me to be unsound."

Prohibition Commissioner Kramer has filed no formal protest against the Palmer rulings, but the temperance organisations are mobilising for a determined effort to get Attorney General Daugherty to reconsider the whole question.

The first formal protest was lodged today by the International Reform Bureau through its Superintendent and Treasurer, Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts, who in a letter to the Attorney General asks that the Palmer decision be overruled. He quotes the pharmacopoeia to show that beer is not medicine, supporting the contention with a statement from Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, former Chief of the United States Bureau of Chemistry.

Dr. Wiley's statement says that the ruling is doubtless correct from a theoretical view point, and he agrees with it with regard to its being on the same footing as whiskey, brandy and wine, but insists that whiskey, brandy and wine have no medicinal value.

His statement in detail mentioned the ill-effect on the medical profession of the permission given to write whiskey prescriptions. "It is a notorious fact," he says, "that a number of physicians are writing prescriptions for whiskey by the tens and hundreds who, prior to the enactment of the Volstead law, probably did not write a hundred prescriptions a year. The indulgence granted has brought innumerable troubles to the pharmacist. So great has the abuse grown that many look upon a doctor as a caterer for intoxicating liquor and a druggist as a barkeeper.

Dr. Wiley insists that if the ruling is permitted to stand the vitality and morbidity statistics will be swelled by a new multitude of sick and convalescent and that convalescence will be a disease that will kill more people than consumption. He concludes by urging an effort to force a reconsideration of the ruling, declaring that "it was not a kindly act of Mr. Palmer to pass this buck to Mr. Daugherty."

Mr. Kramer agreed with Dr. Wiley that the vitality and morbidity statistics would be swelled to such an extent that "there will not be physicians enough to write out prescriptions." Mr. Kramer has not yet received either of the rulings made by Mr. Palmer and declined to discuss in detail their possible effect on the existing enforcement organisation, but he stated emphatically that it would necessitate a complete reorganisation of both the main office and the field force.

RULING GLADDENS BREWERS

New York, March 11.—Further comment was received yesterday from local brewers and from Prohibition officials regarding the approval by former Attorney General Palmer of the ruling which puts beer in the medicinal class to be prescribed by physicians. Col. Jacob Ruppert said:

"We are going to begin the manufacture of beer at once, as there is no longer any doubt of the legality of the manufacture and sale of beer for medicinal purposes."

Christian Feigenspan who owns breweries in Newark, Dover, Paterson and Woodcliff, N. J., said he thought it would hardly be necessary to increase manufacture, as practically all breweries have large stocks on hand. He said near beer is brewed in the ordinary manner and then de-alcoholised.

The brewers said they did not know just how beer would be disposed of, but the consensus was that breweries holding permits would sell to druggists in 50 to 100 case lots and the druggists would fill prescriptions for patients.

State Prohibition Director O'Connor said he believed physicians would be placed under some restrictions in prescribing beer.

United States District Attorney Ross of Brooklyn said he did not believe the beer ruling would seriously hamper enforcement of Prohibition. If physicians are sincere, he said, no great harm can result. Harold B. Dobbs, head of the Brooklyn enforcement staff, said:

"Nothing can make enforcement any more difficult than it is now. If unscrupulous doctors try to circumvent the law we shall simply arrest them and put them in jail, just as we do with those who violate the narcotic restrictions."

William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, said:

"In our judgment the late Attorney General Palmer's ruling in behalf of the brewers as medicine men will not bring back beer for beverage purposes, as the brewers hope will be the result of this entering wedge, but will ultimately result not only in withdrawing legal sanction of the beer and wine leaks on alleged medical grounds, but also in withdrawing the permission to prescribe even alcoholic spirits for medical purposes."

Whiskey valued at nearly $5,000 was seized yesterday aboard the sugar freighter Mary by customs officials when the vessel docked after arriving from Cuba.

Speakers Tell Of Growth Of Chinese Renaissance

Intellectual Awakening Gaining Enormously In Influence, China Continuation Lecturers Report At Annual Meeting

The second day's session of the ninth annual meeting of the China Continuation Committee, now being held in Union Church Hall, was devoted mainly to consideration of the relation of the intellectual awakening in China to the Christian Church. This subject was dealt with in four carefully prepared papers given yesterday by Dr. T. T. Lew, Dean of the Theological Department of Peking University; Dr. P. F. Price, Secretary of the Union Committee of Nanking; Dr. R. Y. Lo, Editor of the China Christian Advocate (Chinese), and Mr. J. L. Childs, Y.M.C.A. Student Secretary in Peking.

Dr. Lew gave a stirring interpretation of China's intellectual awakening and its bearing upon Christian work as seen from the inside. This movement was summarised as a new attitude to life and one that inspired the race with new hope and courage. It is a movement primarily of learning. One of its outstanding results is the popularisation of the Baiwa, or vernacular, which has been adopted by 150 periodicals as their medium of expression. Its chief interest is in the welfare and progress of men and in the application of science to everything, past, present and future. It is an attempt to test life in China. The movement, while under strong leadership, is as yet without organisation; it is intensely democratic, scientific, social and fearless. Like everything else religion is being criticised though most of the leaders recognise that it is essential.

RELIGIONS CHALLENGED

Christianity like all other religions is also being challenged and its foundations passed under critical review. At the same time there is recognition of what Christianity has done for China; it is dogma and not the results of Christianity that are being attacked. In its emphasis upon social betterment, the movement indirectly supports Christianity. Dr. Lew felt strongly that the movement will live and urged Christian leaders to cease being too dogmatic, to acquire the scientific attitude, to be democratic and to emphasise on the social message of Jesus.

Dr. Lew presented the movement from the viewpoint of Western trained Chinese from among whom many of its leaders have come. Dr. Price treated the movement from the viewpoint of the missionary. He felt that the movement bore the marks of youth and was critical with the easy criticism of youth. He felt also that the loss of the distinction between right and wrong evident in some of the utterances of its adherents, and the prescence of a license mistaken for liberty were serious dangers that needed to be guarded against. In dealing with the attitude of Christianity toward the movement Dr. Price urged the Christian forces in China to present a united front and hoped that in some way, possibly through the China Continuation Committee, some common principles of belief in which all Christians in China could agree, might be found. He suggested that three of these should be the miraculous work of Christ, the Bible rule of faith and practice and the social gospel. He felt, however, that the Chinese Church must meet this intellectual movement with life and not with theological formulas.

IS FACT TO BE FACED

Dr. R. Y. Lo said the movement is a fact to be faced. Since there is no conflict between intellectual Christian faith and this movement there is no need for the Christian Church to be antagonistic to the movement. He felt that Christianity, being a friend to learning, could present itself in terms of reason and so win a hearing. The leaders of the movement are earnest truth seekers and lay their emphasis on life and personality both social and individual. Dr. Lo also stated that the Christian Church has a great task before it in working with this movement in helping to adjust social relationships in China and urged that Christian leaders carefully and sympathetically study it.

Mr. J. L. Childs pointed out that the prestige of this movement among the students is enormous. It was also shown that it is influencing an increasing number of the people in general. He indicated that there is a certain conflict of ideas among the leaders of the Renaissance but showed that this is paralleled in the West. He referred to the Young China Association which at first required that none of its members should espouse religion but which, owing to pressure from its membership, was now reconsidering this requirement. The pressure of the movement was being felt by all kinds of Christians and especially by those in the schools. While the literary productions of its writers were largely borrowed from the West the movement has taken modern ideas and adapted them to Chinese life. Mr. Chiles felt that Christianity has had a great deal to do with bringing about this revolution which must for that reason be taken seriously by the Church. He stated that this renaissance is a more genuine revolution in the life of China than that of 1900!

REAL SOCIAL REVOLT

It is a revolt against existing social conditions in China and represents a basic split with China's past. In general Mr. Chiles designated the movement as a Chinese movement to rebuild Chinese life. He emphasised the great honesty in the minds of many of the leaders and the sacrifices they were enduring for the sake of the truth they were espousing. He gave the seven following characteristics of the movement: (1) Dissatisfaction with society in China; (2) A break with China's past; (3) A critical attitude; (4) A scientific spirit; (5) Loyalty to democracy and freedom; (6) A recognition of the principles of love and service as the supreme principles of society; (7) Opposition to dogma or an effort to rationalise life. He felt that instead of being anti-Christian it was in many respects already Christian in its nature and therefore urged that the Christians should seek to understand and utilise it.

The four speakers were asked to meet and suggest for consideration by the meeting some methods of meeting the situation.

Peking, May 5.—The Hankow mail train did not arrive on Sunday last. It appears that a train ran off the track at Knotsun (about a thousand li from Peking) and all traffic was stopped until next day. Delay and confusion were also caused at about the same time by a fire on a freight train loaded with cotton near Paotingfu.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

May 5, 1921.

Spot and forward bar silver each up 1/8d. in London yesterday. New York price unchanged and the London/New York cross rate 398. Official rates here today unchanged from yesterday with the exception of the Gold Dollar rate which was raised to 64¾. Market firm throughout the day with speculators selling. Business in Sterling done at rates varying between 3/5⅛ and 3/5⅜ and in Gold Dollars between 68¼ and 68¾. Few bills offering and market quiet. India bought silver again in London yesterday but it is rather unlikely she will continue buying at this level in which event a further improvement in rates can hardly be looked for.

May 6, 1921.

Spot and forward bar silver each up 1/4d. in London yesterday. New York price 61⅞ cents and London/New York cross rate 397⅜. Official rates here today unchanged with the exception of the Gold Dollar rate which was dropped to 64½. Market throughout the day very firm with speculators selling. Business in Sterling done at rates varying between 3/5¼ and 3/5½ and in Gold Dollars between 68¾ and 69¼. Market closed a shade easier but nevertheless firm with sellers of Sterling at 3/5⅜ and of Gold Dollars at 68¾. India again bought silver in London yesterday and market there seems firm. However, New York advices are less strong with sellers rather than buyers at the official quotation.

Cotton

Messrs. J. Spunt and Company write as follows in their weekly cotton market report of today:

China Cotton:—Although our market during the past week manifested but very little activity prices ruled higher than in the previous period by Tls. 1.00 to Tls. 1.50 per picul, due to the very meagre receipts from the interior marts and the bullish attitude of holders of stocks who are apparently confident in bringing about sooner or later a relaxation of the bearish sentiment still being entertained by Consumers and from a review of the general situation, taking into consideration the existent strength in Indians, there is every likelihood of their anticipations materialising provided there be no weakening, in the meantime, entailed in their financial resources.

Under the circumstance, therefore, a replenishment of depleted stocks at present rates would be a wise step and may prove gratifying in the not very distant future. Tone of the market, future. Tone of the market, firm.

Japan's Protest

IN reply to the American and Chinese notes regarding the Japanese protest against the Federal Wireless contract, the Japanese government declares in effect that it will not permit the United States and China to carry their agreement into effect. These two great friendly countries of huge populations and vast resources, whose long shore lines dominate both sides of the Pacific North of the Equator, are not to talk to each other direct because of a secret agreement exacted from a corrupt Peking clique dominated by the small island government. The Japanese government declares that the Mitsui agreement purporting to grant a monopoly to the Mitsui company was kept secret "because the interests of the parties to a contract such as the present one did not warrant the publication of all the documents appertaining thereto." It also protests because the interests of a Japanese corporation are at stake, and declares that as a government it must protect those interests.

But the Japanese government goes further than this. It attempts to compare this contract with mining and railroad concessions and even cable agreements, none of which has anything to do with the argument. The whole note is one of equivocation and evasion and is the most clumsily worded and thoughtless document we have ever known the Tokio government to emit.

So far as the mining and railroad contracts go, there is nothing to be said because the whole thing is irrelevant and out of court. As to the cables, everyone knows that in the event of war they can be cut when such action is deemed necessary.

The position therefore amounts to this: If Japan is permitted to obtain and control the wireless of the Far East, she will control the news of the Far East. This means that in the event of war between Japan and the United States events in China and the Far East in general would not become known to the rest of the world without the consent of Japan.

It contemplates a situation which the United States could not permit to develop for not only China's safety, but the safety of the United States would be imperilled by it. Therefore the United States sometime ago put the Chinese Government on its guard against the hazards involved in abrogation of the contract entered into between it and the Federal Wireless.

The Japanese government's diplomacy of late seems to have entered upon the lean shanked and slippered Pantaloon phase of senility. It will have to yield on the Shantung question, on the Siberian question, on the one concerning Yap and on this one—the American Federal Wireless. With most of these questions the Japanese people had nothing to do. Their government solely is to blame and secret diplomacy is its agency. Incidentally the peoples of the other countries involved knew nothing about them. Also it may be recalled that as soon as the Federal Wireless contract was signed it was made public.

On the question of Shantung the American government already has said "No" to Japan. On the Yap and the Wireless issues the reply will be the same.

NEVER SAY DIE

I've made a keen playmate of danger,
I can't say I'm stranger to fear;
I've known all the thrills and the starts and the chills
That come when the Scythe whistles near.
I know soon or late it will get me—
Perhaps ere I ever climb high—
Yet I find life right now mighty good when I vow
I'll never say die till I die.

THOSE GRAMMARIANS

As though we had not enough to worry us these days, I see that famous folk are delving into the difficulties of grammar. Mr. Hilaire Belloc, for instance, is defending the last cause of the preposition at the end of a sentence. Strict people tell us that we should not say, "I want a spoon to eat with," but "I want a spoon with which to eat." Mr. Belloc argues that such strictness is unnecessary. For my own part, I would not care where the preposition was, provided I got the spoon.

I have been shown a sentence which ends with three prepositions. I think this might make even Mr. Bélloc pause. We arrive at it thusly: "Nurse" said the small girl, "I want you to read to me." "Very well my dear," the nurse replied, "what would you like to be read to out of?"

Can you beat that?

Speaking of THAT, here's a sentence with five of them in a row: "He said that that that that man used was quite all right." To get the sense of it you emphasise the third that. Try it on your uke.

AND THAT REMINDS ME

of the judge who, though his grammar was a bit faulty, was noted for the excellence of his sentences.

BRINGING UP FATHER

A woman heard that her two sons were in the habit, each at separate times and quite unknown to each other, of taking one of the maids "out for a lark."

Fearing to bring down on their heads the wrath of their father by making a bother about it, she asked them if it were true, but could get no satisfactory answer to her inquiry.

It occurred to her that by a little strategy she might get the truth from the girl, so she said, in a jocular manner: "Now, Mary, I want you to answer me candidly. Which of my two sons do you like going out with best—George or Joseph?"

"Weel, madam," replied the girl, reassured by her mistress's manner, "If ye maun ken, o' the twa I like George best, but for a rale downricht guid spree, gie me the maister!"

'The World Revolution Is Not Coming Out Of Russia,' Says Patrick Quinlan, American Radical, After Nearly A Year Spent Among The Bolsheviks

BY ROWLAND THOMAS
(New York World)

Not as a socialised Utopia brought down from heaven, like that of H. G. Wells and similar parlor revolutionaries—not as a Red confusion worse confounded, like that of the American business man who recently gave his impressions in this paper—but as a stretch of earth like any other, where men like you and me are striving against extraordinary handicaps to conduct an experiment of extraordinary importance and have so far, all things considered, been extraordinarily successful, does Patrick Quinlan see Soviet Russia.

"What is the matter over there now?" he was asked.

"Why anything," he countered, and when reminded of the revolt in the Cronstadt-Petrograd district and the reported disturbances in Moscow and elsewhere, ignored them for the moment.

"Russia," he said, "must not be judged by any American standards, but in the light of her Central-Eastern European setting, her own past history and the present-day circumstances and conditions, the wastage caused there, as everywhere else, by the war, and the paralysis caused by the blockade. Judged so, Russia is doing remarkably well.

"The Federated Soviet seem to me one of the three strongest Governments in Europe—Great Britain and Spain being the other two. Their rule is drastic and autocratic, but again only as contrasted with Western, not local, traditions. And again it must be remembered that war and revolution have but recently been there. To win a war any Government must be made drastic and autocratic, as our own was under President Wilson. Efficiency, getting results, is the only real test. So tested, the men who are ruling Russia are successful. They have succeeded in getting the whole machinery of government firmly in their grasp, and throughout the whole territory—comprising one-eight of the globe, the largest continuous stretch of national territory in the world—they are feeding the entire population, which necessarily implies maintaining transportation, law and order. Life is safer today in Moscow than it is in New York City. There are almost no crimes against the person—crimes of violence—and I saw only one trolley accident while I was there, though the system is antiquated and the city contains 2,000,000 people now and is as overcrowded as New York.

"Also," he went on, "their system of elections and appointments has that extreme flexibility which industrial and efficiency engineers now regard as essential to ideal organisation. Instead of being tied down to a local constituency a man can function in the place where he is most needed and useful. This enables the Central Government to maintain its very firm control even in remote localities."

Again Mr. Quinlan was reminded of the Cronstadt-Petrograd revolt as a possible indication that the Central Government was losing its grip on Russia.

"I do not think it indicates that," he answered. "It is the first serious internal disturbance since the Bolshevists got complete control of Russia, but it does not come as a great surprise to one acquainted with the governmental machinery. In view of the rigid political control of the army, friction was bound to develop between the old-fashioned military men commanding the troops and the political 'Commissaries' who 'are attached to every regiment and every staff sevice unit and who constantly report to the Central Government.

"It may be," he added, "that in some instances the element of racial dislike, jealousy and resentment is involved. Many of the political Commissaries are Jews. Most of the army officers are Russians. But I should be very hesitant about attaching much weight to that fact, which is the result of a pure accident, not of any plan. It merely happens that there are more Jews than Russians who, as a result of education, travel and business experience, are qualified to fill these difficult positions. At any rate, there are enough Russian Commissaries to make it clear that the basic trouble is not racial but personal—the traditional confict always looked for when military and civil authorities are locked in a cage together.

"So," he went on, "the Cronstadt affairs seems more a protest against the system of internal management of the army than anything else. I do not see how it can hope for success, because the Government, controlling all means of transport and communication, can isolate it and starve it to death, so to speak. I do not see how any revolt anywhere in Russia could become really dangerous to the Government, because the Government is the Communist Party, and the members of that party have surrendered all their rights as individuals and given full power to their officers to mobilise them at any moment as military forces and transfer them anywhere. While I was in Moscow one such group was mobilised and sent clear to Siberia, where a troublesome situation had developed. Instead of protesting or grumbling at this duty, the members went eagerly.

"The Communist Party is by far the largest, best organised and most effectively placed group in Russia. There are some 600,000 enrolled card members, and it is not easy to become one. Joining the party is as serious a business as joining a lodge of one of the oldest and most conservative secret orders in this country. A candidate has to undergo a year's probation, and after admission continued membership is dependent on behavior. There is a constant weeding-out process of those who prove undesirable. The net result is an extremely well-compacted body of men and women, mostly industrial workers, who control the trade unions. And the trade unions are the Government. Who," asked Mr. Quinlan, "is going to revolt against an organisation like that, and how is he going to revolt successfully?"

He was asked what, had impressed him as he watched the Soviet system in operation.

"First of all," he answered, "its extreme indirection. Theoretically, Russia is governed by men elected by the universal suffrage of all industrial workers and subject to recall. Actually, the men high up are remote from the rank and file. Delegates to the local Soviet are elected by the trade unions in each 'Gobernie' or district. The local Soviets elect delegates to the Federal Soviet, known as the All-Russian Congress, which in turn elects the Central Committee. This committee, being a comparatively large and cumbersome body, delegates much of its power to the Praesidium, or Cabinet, of fifteen men, which to a great extent is in the control of three persons—Lenine, Trotzky and the Kamenoff who was in London with the War Trade Commission till the British Government insisted on his departure. By its political agents this triumvirate penerates all parts of Russia and every night receives wired reports from all the principal centers of population."

In passing, he mentioned one other person here, Kallenin, who as Chairman of the Central Committee might be called the President of the Soviet Russian Republic.

"A nice, pleasant, quiet old man," he said. "There is gossip that his quietism may be one reason why Lenine, the real ruler, supported him for his position. A peasant himself, Kallenin is very popular with the peasantry and spends a large part of his time travelling and talking with them. He may, because of this popularity, prove very useful later in bridging the gulf between the industrial workers and the peasantry, of which I shall speak before we are done.

"Among the tasks which this Government, so organised, faces," he went on, "of course one of the most pressing is that of maintaining the party in power, as an American politician would say—or of 'guarding the revolution,' as they phrase it. I was struck by the readiness with which Lenine will stretch any point for that purpose. A Socialist is not supposed to be opportunist, but he is frankly so, 'for the sake of the revolution,' as he says. He sees quite clearly that conditions, not theories, confront him, and acts accordingly. When he deems it advisable to use the help of foreign capital he makes terms with it, as in the case of the Vanderlip concessions in Siberia. When men had to be compelled to work, he compelled them. When control of the press and prevention of oral criticism seemed to him necessary he swept free speech out of Russia with the comment that the supposed right of free speech was only a bourgeois prejudice.

"Make no mistake about Lenine's said Mr. Quinlan. "He holds Russia in his hand and holds it by force of his intelligence. He knows the country and the people thoroughly. He does not understand America at all—at times he seems to fail to understand England—but he makes no mistakes at home. You hear less critcism of him there than of anybody else. At the last referendum taken in a group of factories he received more votes than Trotzky, the second man, by something like eighty to one, and he is so popular that men of all classes trim their beards to resemble his. Coming out of Russia I even saw an Englishman wearing a 'Lenine beard.' But he had it reshaped when he reached Riga.

"Besides 'guarding the revolution' by all appropriate means," Mr. Quinlan went, on, "Lenine and his colleagues are, as I have said, maintaining internal order through a Government by decree, feeding the entire industrial population—through the Supreme Council of Political Economy, with 25,000 employees in Moscow alone and over a million in the country—carrying on war on all fronts and as fast as possible constructing an educational system, though sadly handicapped by lack of plant, supplies and teachers."

Asked about social conditions, he said he had found Soviet Russia a decidedly livable place.

"Violent crime, as I have said, is rare. Most offenses are against the rules governing trade in various commodities or gold. Alcoholically speaking, the country is a real Sahara. As to food, the peasants are noticeably fat and the city dwellers are not emaciated. The women and children everywhere look far more vigorous and healthy than those of Germany. Clothing supplies accumulated by the old Government for military purposes have clothed the people comfortably, though a shoe shortage is beginning to be felt. Whatever wear and tear there may be from under-nutrition or lack of enough warm clothing does not affect the appearance of the younger generation. The faces of some of the people over forty have a strained look, which may be due to those causes."

Moscow and the big cities on the Volga he found gay and cheerful, Petrograd depressing. Everywhere there was the docility which he thought a national and racial characteristic.

"Russia," he said, "must be where the lineforming habit started. There is never any shoving or grabbing. If there is one newsboy at a corner and a hundred prospective customers, they will automatically fall into line and wait till their turn comes. Newspapers cost one or two rubles a copy."

Two great problems must be solved by the Soviet leaders, he believed, if this first experiment in Socialism on a large scale was to turn out well and remain a permanent success. Russian industry must be rehabilitated. And the Russian peasantry must be brought to life and educated.

"Remember," he said, "that the Bolshevik seizure of power from Kerensky and his bourgeois associates was not a revolution, but only a coup d'etat. What is going on now is the real revolution, and Socialism as an established fact—nation-wide cooperation in production and equity in distribution—is only a hope still. It has not had a fair chance yet, and therefore in fairness should not be too harshly criticised.

"If the present Government had as much industrial ability as it has political capacity, the success of the experiment would be assured already. As it is, they are not self-sustaining in the industrial field, and it seems to me that to succeed they must manage to secure supplies, equipment and industrial engineers from outside.

"Russia," he pointed out, "is short of skilled workmen too, owing to the fact that the Kerensky revolution and the Bolshevik coup d'etat were fought by mechanics and that element of the population suffered so severely that barely 30 percent of them have survived till today. As a consequence the factories, manned by inexperienced workers, cannot produce to capacity, and furthermore have deteriorated through ignorant misuse or lack of proper upkeep and repairs. But they are running, either under direct Government ownership or Government control, and are still filled with union workers. Everybody has to work and has to belong to a union. Even the members of the defunct middle classes have to do their share. When not available for factories they are put to work in offices and compelled to join the clerical workers' union.

'The World Revolution Is Not Coming Out Of Russia,' Says Patrick Quinlan, American Radical, After Nearly A Year Spent Among The Bolsheviks

"Workers get their food on a card system, their clothing, lodging and fuel, and a small amount of money, 3,000 or 4,000 rubles weekly. Children, whom the state regards as meriting more protection, since they are most defenseless, are provided for either in the institutions installed in the palaces and mansions of the vanished aristocracy or in the homes of their parents, as the latter choose."

When he reached the problem of the peasantry, who live on and manage 80 percent of the land of Russia, the man who once took two years in a New Jersey prison for the sake of his ideas smiled with tolerant amusement.

"The Russian peasant isn't playing ball," he said. "In the old days, when Socialism was a hopeless dream, he went the whole way. As long as there was no chance of his ever owning a single foot of land he was an ardent believer in the ownership of all the land by all the people. Now that all the people do own all the land he is for Communism as it might apply to everything but the soil and its products. There he has become as conservative as any of the old landed proprietors, and it is only with bad grace and as many evasions as he can contrive that he gives up the 80 percent of his produce which the Government requires. But the Government takes it, and also by conscription takes his sons and in the army teaches them to read and write, eventually sending them back to their villages with a little horizon and the beginnings of ideas. Perhaps that is the process by which in the end the viewpoint of the country and city dwellers will be harmonised and the vast mass of the Russian peasantry awakened to modern ideas and brought to the use of modern farming methods.

"But those two main problems, the industrial and the agrarian, have not been seriously attacked yet. So far the Communists have been fully occupied, as patriotic Russians, in defending Russia against aggression, and have done it admirably. The acid test of their politico-social experiment has had to be deferred until such aggression is over. It will come when Russia is left alone by outsiders."

This statement of the situation was so at variance with the usual idea, widespread in Europe and America this winter, of a flood of Red terror pent inside the dam of the Russian frontiers and only waiting time to burst them and sweep across the anti-Socialistic nations with a combination of propaganda and armed force that it led to the natural question whether Russia would reciprocate and let outsiders alone.

"My impression is that it will," was the answer. "Russia is tired of war—all of Russia. It wants rest and needs it. Also, the Russian is by nature not aggressive but pacifistic. The people are not rough. I never saw a single bit of horseplay there. Instead, the people when they get together are eternally singing. The only first fight I saw in seven months was one I could not see—because of my personal participation. I cannot believe that such a people is aching and planning to advance on its neighbors with torch and brickbat and knife. So far as I can study it out, every bit of warfare the Bolshevists have indulged in has been at least strategically defensive. They are determined to keep their frontiers safe. But beyond that I do not believe they will be aggressive. The world revolution is not coming this summer, and is not coming out of Soviet Russia."

"But how about the establishment of the Third Internationale in Moscow, Lenine's membership in it, and certain of his utterances?"

"Never forget," said Mr. Quinlan, "that Lenine is two persons. As a private individual and member of the Communist Party he is a Socialist profoundly interested in the spread of Socialism. But he is also the responsible head of a paternalistic and Socialistic state, and as such one of the most conservative men in Europe. I have never seen this point of his dual personality made clear, and it has caused endless confusion.

"It should always be remembered that Lenine, the astute head of state, never lets himself be trapped into talking as such, particularly about Russia's external relations. All such statements he leaves to the Minister of Foreign Affairs. The Lenine who is interviewed by foreign correspondents or speaks publicly in Russia and is quoted outside is always Lenine the Socialist and party man who wants Communism to spread.

"As to the establishment of the Third Internationale in Moscow—where could the Socialistic Internationale more naturally have its headquarters than in the only politically Socialistic country in the world? But it is no more Russian than it is Danish or English or Italian. It is independent of the Soviet Government. The Russian contingent in it has to meet its own expenses, just as the other contingents have to.

"No" he concluded, "there is no reason for supposing that Dussia is preparing to blow the capitalistic universe into bits this summer or any other summer. She will have her own affairs to attend to."

"But," he was asked, "even if Russia as you say, is disinclined to active aggression, might she not still be the moving cause of a terrific social convulsion in Europe? Might not Communistic propaganda and propagandists, seeping out from the overfilled Russian reservoir, set the suppressed radical masses of Germany aflame and so cause an explosion that would sweep the frail barriers of Poland and Czecho-Slovakia away and plunge all Europe into renewed warfare?"

Patrick Quinlan, learned radical and radical scholar, waited till the last echo of that suggestion had ceased to disturb the silence.

"The suppressed radical masses of Germany?" he repeated finally, and as he spoke his voice was scornful. "Where would you go to find them? There used to be, and I suppose still are a lot of fine German radical writers. But when their chance came, in the Kapp affair, they proved themselves fine radical actors also, they showed their true colors. They were plain flock-of-sheep bourgeois, afraid of their own shadows when it came to radical action. They lost their chance then and they will never get another. An explosion from Germany? How can you create an explosion unless you first have an explosive?"

He was asked if he intended to write a book about Russia.

"No," he answered, with his genial Irish smile. "I was there too long and too intimately."

WIRELESS 'PHONE DEMONSTRATION AT NANCHANG 'Y'

Many Chinese Officials See Display Of Modern Science

(China Press Correspondence)

Nanchang, May 1.—With the military governor at the sending platform and the civil governor at the receiving room of a specially set up wireless telephone station, Prof. C. H. Robertson of the National Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association was able yesterday at the local Y.M.C.A. to demonstrate conclusively to a large audience of leading officials, gentrymen and merchants that vocal messages can be sent through the air without the use of wire or other visible means of connection.

The effect was startling, considering the fact that a twentieth century invention was operating successfully in a tenth century environment. Exclamations of surprise and appreciation were heard constantly during the lecture and demonstration.

Professor Robertson opened his address by referring to the commercial, naval and military uses of the wireless telegraph and telephone. He pointed out that the wireless was already being used in China. Going into the details of the manner in which radio waves are transmitted the speaker explained the principles of the electro magnet, sounder, relay, interrupter and induction coil. He then rang a bell, lighted a lamp, operated a hammer and transmitted a signal by sending electric waves from one end of the platform to the other.

A most satisfying feature of the demonstration was the ability to receive prearranged signals from the stations at Wuchang and Shanghai, the latter being five hundred miles to the east of Nanchang. At the end of the meeting the governor was invited to the platform to officially close the demonstration.

He was instructed to press a lever on a machine at the left. Immediately there was a bang at the right and a miniature cannon announced that the session was over.

"This is a wonderful exhibition" said the governor "I have had my eyes and ears opened and shall never forget your visit." On the following day Prof. Robertson was entertained at a banquet at the governor's yamen where he demonstrated the wave meter, selnium bridge, stroboscope and cathode ray tube. The civil governor was host to a feast on the third day.

But the lectures were not confined to the official class. For four days great student audiences filled the specially constructed hall at ten o'clock in the morning and at four o'clock in the afternoon. The evenings were given over to special scientific lectures for teachers and educators. Most of the sessions were presided over by Mr. Wu Sheo-shan, commissioner of education.

Among the many handicaps under which Prof. Robertson labored was a terrific thunder storm which made it necessary to take extra precautions with the antenna and ground wire.

Throughout the lectures the speaker constantly pointed out that science alone was not enough to cure the evils found in China today but that morals and religion were a necessary fundament to a new life. Using the electric wave as an illustration of the invisible he said that there was also the invisible power of God running throughout history and society.

Chinese Silk Mills To Adopt American Testing Methods

(China Press Correspondent)

Peking, May 4.—Chinese silk manufacturers are to adopt Philadelphia methods of testing silk as a result of the visit of the Chinese Silk Commission to the United States last Autumn and Winter. The Chinese silk men visited the United States Silk Testing Plant in Philadelphia last February and were so impressed with the silk-testing facilities there that they ordered a duplicate of the Philadelphia apparatus, which will be set up in Shanghai. The Shanghai plant will be under the supervision of Mr. R. E. Buchanan, who received his training at the United States plant in Philadelphia and has lived long enough in China to speak the language fluently.

The Chinese silk industry is over 3,000 years old, but the idea of having a testing plant for conditioning the product was never entertained until the inspection by the Chinese Commission of the workings of the plant in Philadelphia. Japan has two silk-testing plants, and her industry has derived great benefit from them.

FLORENCE REED

A SPLENDID DRAMA IN SEVEN PARTS

"WIVES OF MEN"

FLORENCE REED DOES BRILLIANT WORK AS STAR OF PIONEER FEATURE

Reviewed by Walter X. HILL.

That Florence Reed is starred in "Wives of Men" should be assurance of superlative dramatic entertainment for those who find all too little really good acting in the average run of motion pictures. The Pioneer Film Corporation made the production, written and directed by John M. Stahl, and deserves unstinted praise for the excellence in detail and furnishing that have served as "atmosphere" for the intensely dramatic offering.

Massive settings in scenes of splendor largely confine that action to interiors, and for contrast to the sumptuous furnishings of the mansion where much of the plot develops, there are vistas that show a modest flat and an east side tenement. One gets a rather complete idea of how both extremes in New York's population move and habitate. Florence Reed, mistress of the art of make-up, fashion plate and gown model supreme in her class, cannot be too highly praised for her interpretation of an exceedingly difficult role. Her character is one that barely has opportunity to "flash" Miss Reed in her loveliest moods.
